

A full-length servery connects the indoor and outdoor kitchens.

■ Louise Baxter

With both the indoor and outdoor kitchens created to a high standard, this new Tuart Hill residence by Inspired Homes has all bases covered for entertaining.

Add to that a full-length servery that connects the two and you have a seamless link for optimum convenience.

“The design of the kitchen blends outside/inside living, with a full sliding window opening to the alfresco area,” Vasko Spaseki, of Inspired Homes, said.

The main Q-stone benchtop spans 9m, with a two-seater breakfast bar, and is made from pure calcite with an 80mm stone wedge in Starlight Black.

In contrast, the kitchen cabinetry is in white gloss lacquer and all the appliances, including an induction cooktop, gas oven, range hood and dishwasher, are stainless steel.

Smoked glass mirror splashbacks and semi-gloss blackbutt floors complete the sophisticated modern look, while functionality is provided in the form of a walk-in pantry with benchtops, drawers and shelving, and motorised flap doors to overhead cupboards.

A Turbo Elite RQT barbecue and wok burner take centre stage in the outdoor kitchen, flanked by Quantum Quartz benchtops in the same Starlight Black finish as the interior.

The module also includes soft-close doors and drawers in matching white gloss lacquer, a single round bowl sink with Piatto horizontal sink mixer and a Vantage two-door commercial bar fridge.

Downlights are fitted into the cedar-lined ceiling and provisions were made for a TV aerial and outdoor gas heater.

Quality continues into the ensuite and laundry, with corresponding fittings and finishes to stay consistent with the kitchens, such as the benchtops, cabinetry and tapware.

A hydrotherapy spa bath adds a sense of luxury to the ensuite, with two built-in headrests for relaxation.

Twin showerheads and vanity basins, a separate toilet and heated towel rails provide comfort and convenience for two people.

The laundry is another example of practical design and easy use, with ample bench and storage space, built-in laundry baskets and utility cupboards.

A coloured glass splashback, glossy cupboards and an Asko washer and dryer prove that functional doesn't need to be drab.
